DINNERS KEPT STEEL UP

Topping Gives More Testimony at the Trust Inquiry.

LIGHT ON INDEPENDENTS

Phœnix Bridge Man Tells How "Competitors" Gathered and Swapped Information.

John A. Topping, chairman of the Republic Iron and Steel Company, declared yesterday that the effect of the Gary dinners was to maintain prices of steel prodnets. He made this statement during his testimony at the hearing in the dis tion suit against the United States Steel

He was asked whether he attended the dinners commonly known as Gary dinners, and said that he had been present at most of them. Ninety per cent or more of the iron and steel industry was, as a rule, represented at those gatherings, he added. "Did those meetings result in maintain ing prices?" asked Jacob M. Dickinson counsel for the government. The effect was to maintain prices, was Mr. Topping's answer. Mr. Dickinson then read the abstract from a speech delivered by Judge Gary at a dinner of this character held on January 11. 1911, in which the chairman of the Steel Corporation spoke about the high obligation each one in the industry had toward his neighbor.

"Did you hear him say that? Did yo hear him say that the obligation was dearer than life?" asked Mr. Dickinson. "I don't remember his words, but I re member the general trend of his remarks." said Mr. Topping. "I would not say that I personally considered the necessity dearer than life. I also allowed some discount to a post-prandial remark," he added, causing laughter. The counsel for the government then re turned to an interrogation of Mr. Topping about a luncheon held in May, 1911, at which the witness had informed Judge Gary of the decision of the Republic Iron and Steel Company to reduce prices on steel bars, which resulted in a similar step by the Steel Corporation.

Merely Courtesy, Says Topping.

The information was given as a matter Iron and Steel Institute, of which he was ment. a member. Among those who were present Mr. Topping recalled James A. Far-E. A. S. John Sterling Dean, of the Phoenix Bridge Company, was the only other witness of the day. He said that the Amerian Bridge Company, through its conne tion with the Steel Corporation, was able to run always at full capacity, while the independents were compelled to reduce their production to 65 or even 40 P of the full capacity in dull seasons cross-examination by Richard V Lindabury, Mr. Dean told of the Bridge Builders' Association, which has its offices n the Hudson Terminal Building. Thi association, he said, was composed of about twenty-five independent manufacturers, and representatives of the trust were not admitted to its meetings.

The members of this association, Mr. Dean further said, met at luncheons, and before and after the meal they discussed prices and exchanged news about their business. The meetings were held the first Tuesday of each month, the witness added.

Laugh Turns on Witness.

"With whom do you exchange this in formation?" asked Mr. Lindabury. "Only with our actual competitors," was the answer that provoked considerable laughter among the attorneys for the Steel Corporation.

Mr. Dean then explained that the ex istence of this association had been called to the attention of the government, and that the Department of Justice had delegated a special attorney to investigate the meetings and to make a report on them. Incidentally he mentloned that Henry E. Colton, one of the government's attorneys in the Steel Trust case, had been present at one of the meetings.

Mr. Colton said later that he had attended a meeting some time ago, when he was gathering evidence against the Steel Corporation as a violator of the Sherman law. He hoped, he said, that the meeting might supply him with hints as to sources for gathering information for his pur

Whether the meetings of the bridge association were legal or not, Mr. Colton would not say. The report about that was still to be made by the official intrusted with the investigation, he explained.

The hearing was adjourned until Tues day morning, on request of counsel for both sides, who found themselves crowded with the study of the testimony of the nine active days of the suit.

Let's help you out of a rut. You've been catering to a tailor perhaps, paying exorbitant prices and kicking every now and then because the fit isn't right, yet you hesitate to make a change. Don't make a change.

Make an experiment. Try on one of our suits and see the fit before you order. Won't say another word. That goes for big men too!

Especially Extra Big Men who no more than small men like the extra bother of repeated fittings. Not to speak of the saving
